

This week was the sixth week of my internship. Nothing much different things I did this week, but I somehow getting to know how to make an app technically. I'm reading a book called "THE LEAN STARTUP" and "How Google Works" and I tried to apply some knowledge which I learned in these books, such as better to product briefly than pursuing perfect produce and so on.

One more thing is that I continue learning French and Chinese as well. I still don't know how to apply this language skills into action and job, but this must help in some way like doing businesses with multi-national teams or managing people from those countries. Lots of things I must concentrate on this week as well, but I will enjoy the rest of two weeks!
