

Dates: January 22nd-26thHours Worked: 42.5h

This was the first week of my internship at WASO. Before started the internship, I made three aims to achieve. “Programming Skills”, “Fluent English Communication Skills at workplace” and “Getting knowledge about doing own business”. WASO is Japanese company so it is rare to talk with English speakers daily, but I have to take call from our customers and analyzing SQL data which is written in English so I am struggling with using English every single day. However, fluency of English is not my final goal. I would like to see how different our working style is different from Japan. I felt comfortable to work in London so far. It is true that we work hard, but working time is flexible and I can go back home as soon as I finish the task of each day. This contributes the efficiency of our job and I thought this is great working culture here.

Additionally, it is great opportunity for me to work in London as an engineer. As you know computer languages are invented in English speaking countries so there are plenty of books regard with computer science. Of course our company’s atmosphere is so open and comfortable and also these studying and researching environment work greatly for me. I found that if I learn couple of more weeks, I would be able to analyze the data of our sales operation so I will try to get more knowledge in this coming week!
